Everybody who goes to the White House comes away pleasantly imto come away from the White House saying equation doubtless lies a large share of his success, as a public man and party leader, in securing acceptance of the policies for which he stands. When before, it is frequently asked, has a President carried the House of Representatives in three Congresses in succession? When before has a President sustained such friendly relations with the senators that they have rejected none of his nominations for office, or that he, in turn, has had to veto none of their bills? For this is substantially the situation. The very few vetoes and rejected nominations, and their number has been triffing, have rarely been unwelcome to the other side, but were rather in the nature of the correction of errors due to newly dis covered evidence. COURTESY TO AN OPPONENT. When the secretary of the Anti-Imperialist League first visited Washington th President came out of a Cabinet meeting to receive him-a most unusual courtesy. Many a President who had been flattered as McKinley has been would have taken affront at some of the utterances of the festival the past two days, adjourned yes- | league, and, standing on his dignity, have refused altogether to see its representative. One of McKinley's predecessors steadily refused to see during his term of office an eminent doctor of divinity who several times called on public business, because he place at Readville, Mass., Lext Friday, has had, as a preacher, alluded to his alleged Sabbath-breaking propensities. President Arthur, with all that graciousness of manner which has associated itself with his name, proved a hard master for the clerical force in his immediate employ. If he desired a letter or a paper from the files for any purpose, he could brook no delay, and was seemingly unwilling to grant that time might be necessary even for those who served a President. The session closed with an address by A. 1 In fact, those who know the White House best, in its various aspects towards the public, are able to relate a great many incidents showing considerable human nature on the part of the various Presidents who have occupied it, but of McKinley they have nothing to relate but pleasant things, kindly acts and genial ways. He seems never offended at those who have most severely criticised him. We read in the newspapers one day that Senator Tillman declares that Mr. McKinley is gradually becoming a dictator, to the subversion of the old Republic; the next day we read that Mr. Tillman went to the White House to ask for a small consulship for one of his constituents, and, strange to relate, that although an opposition Democrat, he readily obtained it. In fact, Tillman has said in applied to the cancellation of mortgage a public way that in his opinion no finer gentleman from George Washington's time to the present had ever occupied the presidential chair. He never went to the White House in the latter part of Mr. Cleveland's administration, just as there were many Republicans of prominence that were not very neighborly with Mr. Harrison, and others, to be sure, who did not like Mr. Arthur.

A dispatch to the London Times from Simla says fighting has occurred at Peiwar Kotal pass, at the upper end of the Kuram valley, between the Ameer's troops and the Jargis, a tribe which has long complained of Afghan oppression. Some hundreds of the tribesmen moved across the British border, camping on the hills. The Ameer's troops surprised them, crossing the boundary in pursuit. The local British authorities warned the Afghan officer in command that he must prevent his men from transgressing the frontier. The Brussels correspondent of the London Times says the bill for the regulation of the administration of the Congo Free State as soon as it is annexed to Belgium has just been published. It is an interesting study as an experiment in colonial government, but compares unfavorably with the freer ideas, based on autonomy, adopted by Great Britain. Its leading feature is the almost autocratic power conferred on the King, who is controlled neither by councilors nor Parliament. Legislative power is exercised by loyal decree, and the King controls the civil and military services, the administration of justice and taxation. NO BREAK IN CABINET.
